

Robinson Defends London Treaty In Talk at Ft. Smith

Speaks Before the Annual Convention of Bar Association
PARITY IS VOICED
Points Out View of Persons As To Results of Conference

FORT SMITH, June 5.—(A)—Characterizing as "trivial" the controversy between members of the navy board over the combat value of eight and six inch gun cruisers, United States Senator Joe T. Robinson in an address here today defended the London Naval agreement and declared it placed the United States on a parity with Great Britain in sea power.

Senator Robinson, who was one of the American delegates to the naval conference, spoke before the annual convention of the Arkansas Bar Association.

After reviewing the treaty, Senator Robinson declared the "issue is thus narrowed down to the question whether the 10,000 tons additional 6-inch gun ships which the treaty provided over that demanded by the navy board is sufficient to offset any real or imaginary difference in combat value of three ships armed with 8-inch guns and the same number armed with 6-inch guns."

"No doubt you will be astonished to learn that this comparatively small difference is the crux of the controversy now raging in the senate and in the committees on foreign relations and naval affairs."

"It seems hardly worth dispute, and warrants the conclusion that those who attach so much importance to so trivial a subject are not to be relied upon for sound advice."

Continuing further the discussion of cruisers, Senator Robinson said: "Without doubt the sharpest controversies concerning the treaty relate to cruisers."

"When the Washington Conference of 1921-22 left this category unrestricted, both Great Britain and Japan initiated a program which resulted in the laying down and building of 146,000 tons of 8-inch cruisers between 1924 and 1928 by Great Britain, and the laying down of 108,400 tons of the same category by Japan during the years 1922 to 1928."

"Following the World war, the United States never laid down a ton of 8-inch cruisers until 1926. Beginning with that year she has arranged to build 130,000 tons, but of this 50,000 were not laid down until 1930."

"During the entire period since the World War the United States has completed only 20,000 tons, whereas Great Britain has completed 110,000 tons and Japan 68,400 tons of 8-inch cruisers. With respect to the other cruiser-sub-category, the 6-inch gun cruisers, the United States has not laid down one ton since the World war, nor has Great Britain. Japan has laid down 18,475 tons."

"We completed in 1923 to 1925, inclusive, 70,500 tons of 6-inch and under cruisers. Great Britain during 1926 completed 15,130 tons of this sub-category, while Japan between 1922 and 1925 completed 49,495 tons."

"The Treaty (of London) provides for eighteen 8-inch gun cruisers with an aggregate of 180,000 tons for the United States, and twelve for Japan with a total tonnage of 108,400, which is exactly 60 per cent of our tonnage."

"The comparison between Great Britain and the United States as to this sub-category shows eighteen 8-inch gun cruisers with 180,000 tons for the United States, and 12 comparable ships, totaling 150,000 tons, for Great Britain."

"At this point it should be observed that the British are compensated for our superiority in this sub-category, namely, the 8-inch gun ship, by an excess of tonnage over ours in the 6-inch gun sub-category."

Senator Robinson pointed out the point of view of persons in the United States and England as to the results of the conference.

"Many Englishmen, including that great political leader, Winston Churchill, criticized the program for Great Britain and the United States incorporated in the treaty on the ground that it insures superiority to our country in naval power over Great Britain."

"To illustrate how great minds differ, Admiral Bristol, chairman of our naval board, and others recently declared that the treaty does not give parity but places the United States in a position of inferiority."

Camden Woman in Golf Tournament

Mrs. Alexander Remains In Trans-Mississippi Play

TULSA, Okla., June 5.—(A)—Feminine representatives of five states remained Wednesday night in the fourth annual Trans-Mississippi golf tournament with the field of 186 narrowed down to eight.

The 1930 Oklahoma champion, Mrs. Tom Wallace of Sapulpa, Mrs. R. E. Drennon of Tulsa and Mrs. Hubert S. Clark, former state titleholders were upholding Sooner land's colors.

Missouri was in second place with Miss Virginia Popp and Mrs. R. J. Kohn, both of St. Louis.

Mrs. Dorothy Klotz Pardue, of Sioux City, Iowa; Mrs. George Hipple of Hutchinson, Kansas; and Mrs. Stanley Alexander of Camden, Ark., were the others in the race.

In a match that likely will steal the show Thursday Mrs. Wallace will vie with Mrs. Hipple, who has won the Kansas championship for the last four years. Mrs. Wallace Wednesday eliminated Mrs. Theo Van Knoop of Houston 2 up and to play after the Texan had a one hole lead at the turn.

Mrs. Hipple was one down to Mrs. P. C. Roebon of Wichita Falls, Tex., at the 15th but spurred to score a 5-4-5 on the next three holes to win the match two up. At the start of the second nine, Mrs. Doebon shot four 4's and one three at her Kansas opponent, Mrs. Hipple scored a splendid 83, the low medal for the day.

Kiwanis To Place Club in Prescott

Dr. Anderson Addresses Hope Club—Miss Murph Sing

Two splendid songs by Miss Evelyn Murph, talented local singer, and a speech by Dr. W. R. Anderson, Presbyterian minister, comprised the entertainment program at the Kiwanis Club Thursday at their regular luncheon at the Hotel Barlow.

Twelve leading business men of Prescott have signified their intention of joining a Kiwanis Club which is now being organized in that city by the Hope civic club. As soon as a representative from the district governor's office at Kansas City can be obtained, a dinner is to be arranged in that city at which time organization of the club will be perfected.

Dr. Anderson delivered a strong address to the club on the subject, "What Are You Worth." He directed attention to the fact that many people might deem this an impertinent question when applied to the wealth of an individual. In China, and other countries, any person's "caste" or social position depends upon their financial wealth. In America, our place in life is of times depended upon our service to the community and state in which we live. Edison, Steinmetz, and others, are outstanding examples, he said. Here in Hope, stated Dr. Anderson, "there are many people whose passing away or whose leaving our community, would cause a distinct loss to Hope; a loss that would be felt by all. Just as in the church, where there are workers, shiners and slackers," he said, "every community has these three strata of society. And in the civic development of any community, a large number of the most valuable citizens—the best workers to be found in such civic organizations as the Kiwanis club."

Dr. A. J. Neighbors has charge of next week's Kiwanis program. The club is to meet at the Barlow Hotel Friday evening at 7:15 to make a good-will trip to Columbus, where they will present a program which has been arranged for them.

Expect 100,000 At Anniversary of Battle That Turned Fight to Freedom

GASTONIA, N. C., June 5.—The president of the United States and some 100,000 of his fellow citizens are coming to a mountainside near here next October to celebrate the 150th anniversary of one of the most important conflicts ever waged on North American soil.

The occasion will be the sesqui-centennial celebration of the Battle of King's Mountain, turning point of the latter part of the Revolutionary War, the beginning of the phase that finally led to Cornwallis' surrender at Yorktown. Though it was an engagement of major importance in American history, not more than 2500 took part on both sides.

President Hoover has assured the sponsors of the event that nothing short of a national emergency will prevent him from coming to King's Mountain to make the address of the occasion.

In coming here, he will, in reality, be coming home—in a way. Hoover's Ancestor a Pioneer

STUTTGART, June 5.—(A)—The body of Cicero Spence, timber worker, drowned in White river several weeks ago in connection with the death in which two men are held on a murder charge, was found last night according to word received at the sheriff's office here today.

It was found near the point where Spence's wife told officers her husband was shot and thrown from a log while he was still alive by Jack Worls and Jessie Nixon.

Mrs. Spence said the two men, who are now held on a murder charge, kept her prisoner all through the night and assaulted her. Worls surrendered later, and told officer that he shot Spence in self-defense.

After Mrs. Spence gave her version of the killing, a murder charge was brought against both men.

City Gets Credit For Air Markings

Guggenheim Certificate Given Standard Oil Co. and Hope

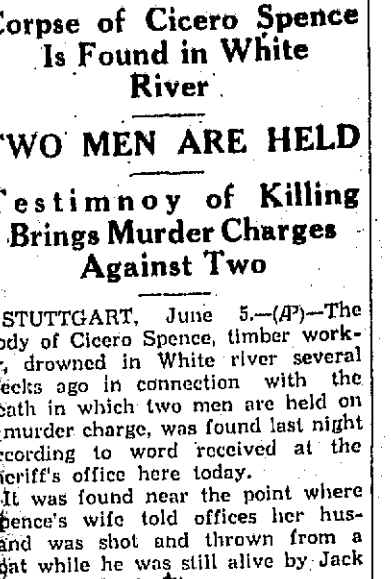

A certificate in recognition of the work of the Standard Oil company of Louisiana in placing identification marks on the roofs of its local property for the benefit of aviation, has been received here by E. R. Johnson, local Standard agent, and Mayor Ruff Boyett.

The certificate is executed by the Daniel Guggenheim Foundation for the Promotion of Aeronautics, and is signed by Harry F. Guggenheim and Charles A. Lindbergh.

The certificate sets forth the following: "This is to certify that the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana has completed identification work for the service of aerial navigation, this contributing to the establishment of a nation-wide system of transportation by air. In recognition of this achievement, this certificate is presented to the City of Hope by direction of the board of directors of the Foundation."

Mayor Boyett called attention today to the fact that in addition to the work done privately by the Standard Oil company, the city has placed the name of Hope in huge letters on the roof of the city hall, with the usual arrow indicating the direction in which the local landing field lies from that building.

Union County Farmer Has Display of Large Turnips

EL DORADO, June 5.—(A)—Here's more ballyhoo about a new heavy-weight contender. The subject this time, however, is not a boxer, but a 10-pound turnip grown by J. E. Rowell, a farmer living seven and a half miles west of here.

The giant turnip, a purple top, and a runner-up for weight honors scaling eight and a half pounds, are on exhibition in a store window here. The lighter turnip is of the "cow's horn" variety. Both were grown in a garden spot that has been under cultivation for fifty years, Rowell said.

The once mighty Seminole tribe of Indians now numbers 408, according to the 1930 census. That is an increase of 14 since 1920.

Effect Far-Reaching
The effect of the battle was far-reaching. Not only did it give the cause of independence a stimulant that it needed very badly; it started Cornwallis on his disastrous retreat to the north; he was defeated at Guilford Courthouse a little later, withdrew down to Charleston and finally was driven into a corner at Yorktown and compelled to surrender.

Ferguson's grave, marked by a simple headstone, is on the battlefield. It is covered with a heap of stones, an old tradition requiring each visitor to add one to the heap. When the grave was opened, many years ago, the skeleton of "Virginia Sal" was found beside the body of the dead officer. Her remains were given a new grave and Ferguson's body was re-interred.

The battleground, contrary to popular belief, is just south of the North Carolina line, in South Carolina. The field is owned by a D. A. R. chapter. A $35,000 monument erected by the federal government was dedicated in 1909.

Bishop Cannon Before Senate For Third Time

Announcement That Voluntary Testimony Had Come to End, Made

MAY BE PUNISHED

Committee Puts Report On Record and Adjourns Till Wednesday

WASHINGTON, June 5.—(A)—After tiring a legal quorum for the first time to deal with its recalcitrant witness, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the senate lobby committee today had to deny itself a vacant witness chair.

Bishop Cannon, appearing for the third time before senate committee, lasted just long enough for a statement to be read concerning inquiries into his Anti-Smith campaign activities of 1928, and to announce that his voluntary testimony had come to an end.

As he limped from the committee on crutches, followed by applause and hisses, he called back to the senators that he could be found at his office, if the committee wanted to subpoena him.

Walsh warned the witness that he had not been excused, and that a later case would be dealt with later. Whether he is to be punished for contempt of the senate committee, will be decided on the return of Chairman Caraway from Arkansas.

With no witnesses before it, the committee proceeded to put into record various reports related to the Anti-Smith campaign, and then adjourned until next Wednesday.

LITTLE ROCK, June 5.—(A)—Cancelling speaking engagements in Arkansas, Senator T. H. Caraway of Arkansas, Chairman of the Senate Lobby committee was reported to be making plans to get back to Washington due to the controversy in the Bishop James Cannon, Jr. hearing.

Flying—Then and Now

THERE is something intensely interesting about Glenn Curtiss' flight down the Hudson river recently—the flight which marked the 20th anniversary of his first flight over that same route, which had the whole country agog and was hailed as a masterpiece of daring.

In 1910 aviation was still in its extreme infancy. The New York World had offered a prize of $10,000 for the first flight from Albany to New York—a stunt which looked as big at that time, as a trans-Atlantic flight looked to us just before Lindbergh's great feat.

Mr. Curtiss, who had put his name right below the names of the Wright brothers as a pioneer aviator, went for the prize. In a curious box-kite sort of airplane, with the pilot's seat far out in front, he took off at Albany and sped down the river at the dizzy speed of 55 miles an hour, sailing along at an altitude of 500 feet, paced by a special New York Central train which finally outdistanced him and beat him to New York.

He made the trip successfully and got his $10,000 check; but nobody supposed that it was anything more than a stunt. Very few people really believe that airplanes would ever be much safer or more reliable than that rickety crate that Mr. Curtiss flew. Probably no one in the country dreamed that two decades more would see the nation criss-crossed by commercial flying companies.

The other day Mr. Curtiss repeated the trip in a modern 18-passenger cabin plane. His pilot, Capt. Frank T. Courtney, was a man who had flown the greater part of the Atlantic. His fellow passengers sat at ease in arm chairs. The cabin was upholstered with more fabric than it had taken to encase the entire plane in which the 1910 hop was made. Instead of dawdling along at 55 miles an hour, the plane sped downstream at three times that speed, maintaining an altitude of around 2000 feet. The railroad trains below were hopelessly outdistanced.

The two trips stand out in marked contrast. In 1910 aviation was a freakish sport for daredevils. Today it is an established business. It still has room for improvement, to be sure; but when one compares Mr. Curtiss' trip of the other day with his trip of 1910, one cannot doubt that the next 20 years will see an improvement equally amazing.

Variety in The Kitchen

PEOPLE who travel about this country a good deal often complain that American cooking is getting standardized. It makes little difference, they say, whether you eat in San Francisco or New York, Galveston or Bangor; the food you get will be just about the same cooked in much the same way.

Undeniably the eating habits of all Americans are quite similar. Nevertheless, there are sectional differences, and the traveler who takes the trouble to inquire about them and to ask for the local specialties can still enjoy a good deal of variety in his meals.

The United Press recently sent a story from New York, analyzing the various sectional preferences in the matter of food. Some of its conclusions are interesting.

New York, for instance, holds up corned beef hash as its favorite restaurant dish. Philadelphia clings to its traditional scrapple. Dwellers in the middle west do not like things highly seasoned. New Orleans, on the other hand, does. Minnesota people eat a great many steaks. California goes for salads.

So it goes. One could add other things. Boston will give you pie for breakfast, and will implore you to have codfish cakes on Sunday morning. San Diego will introduce you to hot tamales. Michigan can show you a thing or two about fried chicken. Baltimore will give you oysters. Any New England state can prove the excellency of blueberry pie for the traveler.

There's a fair bit of variety there. It is possible that the uniformity of menus is more due to the traveler than to the native sons. The man who goes about the country ordering ham and eggs, or hamburger and onions, at every place he comes to has no one but himself to blame. If he'll take the trouble to find out what the local favorites are he can vary his diet considerably—and, incidentally, do some mighty pleasant dining as well.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—It used to be small Latin-American countries that Uncle Sam was accused of bullying. Now there seems to be a plea of growing volume that we be a little more considerate in our treatment of neighboring Canada.

There is plenty of testimony to the effect that Canadians have been more or less irritated for some time by American "arrogance." But Canadians with whom this writer has talked have taken the rates of the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill far more seriously than the minor irritations previously accumulated.

Worst of all, Canada decided to take a whack back at us. Probably else to do with the growth of opinion among us that we ought to be nicer to Canada. One sedition ignores a sock at one's pocketbook.

So Canada Passed a Law

Both countries were able to strike at each other and when it appeared that our lawmakers in devising the new tariff law were going to disregard the fact that Canada is our biggest export customer the Canadians revised their own tariff rates in such manner that the Department of Commerce estimated 25 per cent of our Canadian exports would suffer adversely.

We have been exporting more than $800,000,000 in goods to Canada yearly. We have been buying less than $500,000,000 worth from her. Lately our exports have been diminishing; the figures showed a 25 per cent decrease in our exports across the border for March as compared with March, 1929.

And they say that the Surface gave all the little boys marbles to shoot.

Gutzon Borglum, sculptor, who took the liberty to delete certain words from Cal Coolidge's history of America to be carved on a mountainside, probably thought he would knock a chip off his shoulder.

John Philip Sousa led 20 Salvation Army bands at one time. At least he knew his score.

Since no one seems to be in sympathy with the Massachusetts man

1929. And that was before the Canadian finance minister announced his tariff changes—which our commercial attaches in Ottawa reported would affect American exports amounting to from $175,000,000 to $225,000,000 a year as well as put British exports to Canada on a much stronger basis of competition.

One widely circulated expert estimate is that the Hawley-Smoot tariff would reduce Canadian sales to the United States by about $80,000,000 a year, whereas the Canadian government's new rates will curtail our exports to Canada by about $110,000,000. There must also be taken into consideration the general effect of increasing preferences granted by Canada to imports from Great Britain.

Mackenzie King, the present Canadian premier, has a record of friendliness to the United States. Political factions have often attacked him on that ground. But although the King government recently put through the House of Commons a measure banning liquor exportation to the United States, it was in no mood to take the Hawley-Smoot tariff without retaliation.

One Canadian viewpoint, which may or may not be common, is expressed by an experienced Canadian writer named Leslie Roberts in the current issue of Harper's Magazine.

"If you have lived beside a fellow grown paunchy with wealth, and have endured the countless irritations and pin-pricks which come from being patronized or having your liberties trodden upon, you will not find it difficult to understand the feeling which is growing in Canada against the United States," Roberts writes.

Great Faith In The New Konjola Medicine Shown

Many Prominent Hope People Among The First To Call at the Briant Drug Store

From every section of Hope and many nearby towns, there came a vast number of people to find out about this new Konjola medical compound. It is appalling to note the great majority of modern people who are suffering from different forms of stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowel disorders. Several prominent well-known citizens were among the first to purchase this medicine.

Konjola is being sold in large quantities at the Briant drug store, this city where large crowds are calling to purchase this medicine or ask for information and advice.

Konjola takes a different form of action on the human system than any previously known remedy. It is a liquid, taken immediately after meals, which works with the medical ingredients of twenty-two natural plants. These have the best possible effect on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels so that your food works with Nature, restoring a more healthy, normal action to these important organs. After all, it is Nature that really does the work, and Konjola simply brings the help that Nature requires. This is the safest surest and best way to conquer the ailments so many people are suffering, for example:

- Sharp pains over the kidneys, a dull aching feeling across the back, swollen limbs, frequent night rising, dizziness, spots before the eyes, yellowish complexion and constipation, wild heart palpitation, feeling like fire from the throat to the pit of the stomach, intense pains and a feeling like a rock in the stomach, sour acidity risings in the throat, cramps, etc.

Many other forms of suffering frequently arise from the disordered condition of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Rheumatism and neuritis are common. Catarrh often develops, which is one of the most stubborn diseases mankind is heir to, with the ringing and roaring in the ears, clogged nostrils and a general wasting away of flesh and energy. This ailment must be conquered from the system within.

The new Konjola comes to Hope for the first time direct from successes in larger cities. Its appearance in one large Indiana city, recently brought so many restorations to health that 561 public statements of endorsement were issued in praise of this remarkable remedy, many from public officials, nurses, ministers, and people in all walks of life.

Konjola is now being sold in Hope at the Briant drug store, where many people are calling to find out about this surprising new medicine. Adv.

"Second Wife" at the Grand Today

Should a husband leave his wife who hourly is expecting to become a mother, and go to the bedside of his first wife's dying son?

This question describes one of the dramatic situations in Radio Pictures' "Second Wife," now showing at the Grand Theatre, and is one that caused an extraordinary amount of discussion among RKO studio employees when the all-talking picture was being filmed.

The question of which one was in the right was argued pro and con. Some took the stand that Lili Lee, cast as the "Second Wife," was right in asking her husband to stay with her. Others claim they would have acted in the same manner as Conrad Nagel, the husband-father, and rushed to the dying boy's side.

When Russell Muck, the director of "Second Wife" called a rest for lunch the arguments would start. At every table in the studio cafe could be heard:

"She was right. He should have stayed with her."

"She was wrong—and selfish to ask him to stay."

"I know, I'm married for the third time."

"Step-children always cause trouble. I've got two."

"What do you know about it? You're not even married."

Electricians, stage hands, property men, sound recording experts—all joined in the debates. In a few cases the talk grew so heated that blows were narrowly averted.

And it's not settled yet. Which one was right?

Charge Filed Against Postmistress at Dalark

ARKADELPHIA, June 4. Mrs. G. Langley, postmistress at Dalark for several years, was arrested by a United States marshal and taken to Little Rock, charged with a shortage in her post office accounts, Sheriff Alfred Duke, of this county, was requested to send a deputy sheriff with the federal officers and delegated Tom Tolleson. They went to Dalark, in Dallas county, 15 miles east of here and took Mrs. Langley into custody. It was learned that Mrs. Langley's accounts were short about $700. In Little Rock, she made bond and returned to her home.

Who Is That Doddering Old Gent Out There?

Base Ruth again led the Yankees with a record home run hitting performance. He made one in each lead with a total of 14, and broke a major league record by hitting eight in six games. He drove in seven runs in the two contests. Earl Combs made seven hits.

While some of us may have thought Colonel Jake Ruppert extravagant and a bit foolish for contracting to pay a doddering old fellow named Babe Ruth $80,000 a year for this baseball season and next, it appears now that the colonel struck a bargain. The Babe is forever crossing up the fellows who would have him relegated to the scrap heap.

Relief From Curse of Constipation

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or even increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store. John S. Gibson Drug Co. Adv.

THE VIOLET
Grown in a green and shady bed
A modest violet grew;
Its stalk was bent, it hung its head,
As if to hide from view.

And yet it was a lovely flower,
Its colors bright and fair;
It might have graced a rosy bower,
Instead of hiding there.

Yet there it was content to bloom,
In modest tints arrayed;
And there diffused a sweet perfume,
Within the silent shade.

Then, let me to the valley go,
This pretty flower to see;
That I may also learn to grow
In sweet humility.

Wet-Democratic Coalition Threatens Pennsylvania G. O. P.

PHILADELPHIA, June 5.—(UP)—Now that the bitter primary of the Republican Party in Pennsylvania has known in years is over, speculation turns to the November election. Ordinarily this merely would be a matter of form as Pennsylvania is overwhelmingly Republican. This year, however, developments of the primary contest and the wet issue may make the race a closer one in November.

Secretary of Labor Davis is the Republican nominee for the U. S. Senate short term. He defeated Senator Joseph R. Grundy, of Bristol decisively in the primaries. Gifford Pinchot, former governor, is the gubernatorial nominee. Both are dry.

Pinchot defeated Francis Shunk Brown, former attorney general, in a hair-breadth finish in the May 20 primary.

Ordinarily both Davis and Pinchot would be assured of a walkaway with the general election. Davis in the primary had the support of the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh organizations. Pinchot, ostensibly, had neither, but he carried Allegheny county (Pittsburgh) by nearly 15,000 over Brown, although the latter's running mate, Davis, carried the county by more than 30,000.

This discrepancy in the vote in Allegheny county between Davis and Brown may have a far-reaching effect on the chances of the Secretary of Labor in the November election.

Because of the situation created by Brown's failure to carry Allegheny county, any forecast which would assure a walk-away for Davis and Pinchot in November would be premature.

While the big leaders of Philadelphia Republicanism, such as William S. Vare, Charles B. Hall, Sheriff Thomas W. Cunningham and State Senator Samuel W. Salus no doubt will issue orders for 100 per cent "regularity" in the November election, it is a moot question whether the ward leaders, division committeemen and the voters will reflect that attitude.

There has been talk of a wet ticket in November to oppose both Davis and Pinchot. Robert Kelso Cassatt, Philadelphia

Natalie, however, and Alan realize that he loves her, but the engagement that Phillipa has cleverly engineered prevents them from attempting a reconciliation. Phillipa refuses to release him.

Natalie's sister, FLORENCE, takes an interest in Alan and tries to win him back to his home. But Alan's aversion to her prevents him from permitting her still to stand between him and Natalie.

Natalie goes to Alan's office and there meets Bernadine. Her old jealousy flares up again and she is bitterly hostile to Alan. The next day Natalie comes to the office to plead for forgiveness, but Alan is too proud to accept her. Natalie is there, Natalie leaves in despair.

Phillipa, fearful Alan's anger will not endure, uses a letter from Bernadine in a plot to discredit Natalie. She changes the name of a street and goes to try to one that is worthless. Bernadine comes to the office after the order has been through and she covers the change that has been made in the letter. Suspicion directed at Natalie points to Natalie. Alan believes her guilty.

Natalie is stricken to offer helplessness by his accusation. Alan leaves her through and she is forced to offer to repay her losses. He tells her he is through with Natalie for all time. Bernadine is worried over her little boy, BOBBY's, future.

Not long afterward Alan is hurriedly called to his home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XLII

ALAN did not want to think of Natalie, as he rushed up to Bernadine's in response to the urgent summons from Dr. Wagnall, but he could not put her out of his mind.

She was always present in his thoughts whenever he went to Bernadine's. "It's because we used to live in Westchester," he told himself, half angrily, half excitedly. He did not want to believe Natalie now held even the tiniest place in his heart.

He had not forgiven her for her last letter—she wrote it in anger—though he kept it where he could read it often. "Just to remind myself what an utterly callous creature she is," he would say to himself. "Giving me my freedom! What a gesture! As though she had not ended everything through what she did to Bernadine!"

Bernadine's gradual, but steady sinking, turned his heart to stone against Natalie. Whenever he looked at the sick woman's sunken cheeks and deeply recessed eyes, he felt a new wave of anger come over him.

For Bernadine had never left her bed after Dr. Wagnall had said she must stay there until he gave her permission to get up. To the medical man, the end was coming about as he expected, but Alan could not escape the belief Bernadine had suffered a shock through Natalie's act from which she could not recover.

Had Dr. Wagnall, or Bernadine either, guessed what was in his mind, they could have told him he was wrong—that what was happening had been inevitable for a long time.

But Alan kept his bitterness to himself, and strove to be cheerful when in Bernadine's company. Her heart ached for him because he had lost the woman she was certain he loved, but she did not guess he was constantly burning his memories of Natalie on a pyre of hatred.

He never talked to her of Natalie, or of Phillipa either. Only Bernadine's almost supernatural perception enabled her to see that he was suffering. Once he had come close to telling her about Phillipa—with a vague idea that they ought to meet and discuss Bobby's future welfare together. But in his sensitiveness he shrank from bringing such a suggestion of the end to Bernadine.

He decided it would be best not to speak of Phillipa. Perhaps it would worry Bernadine to know that there was already a girl chosen to be Bobby's foster-mother. For Alan had come to accept Phillipa as a fixture in his life with equanimity.

He was rather glad of her. She adored Bobby. Her disappointment because Bernadine would not allow the little boy to leave the house—Phillipa wanted Alan to bring him down to the office—touched Alan.

Phillipa's disappointment was real enough—there were so many things that Bobby, while enjoying a big dish of ice cream, might have told her. Things that she didn't like to ask Alan directly. And there was no other way of finding them out, for Alan was madly jealous of these days.

She wanted to know, for instance, just how ill Bernadine was. She could have asked Bobby how many times a day the doctor came to see his mother, and weighed the answer for herself. She could have asked him if anybody had talked to him about going away to a school—a plan that Alan told her had been suggested in the event of his mother's dying.

But Alan did not say that the plan had been suggested by the nurse, Nellie, who was fearful that Alan's guardianship of the boy would mean that she would lose the child entirely if he were taken into Alan's home. She knew her shortcomings, Nellie did, and she had a very earnest conviction she would not be engaged to look after Bobby when a sterner mistress than Bernadine was doing the engaging. She had in mind a professional housekeeper, and they were "worse than the wives," to Nellie.

She could at least, she figured, visit Bobby once in a while if he were in a school. Alan had not seriously considered the plan, but he had spoken of it to Phillipa, without giving his opinion on the subject, and she had fed herself with the hope that it might be carried out. To have a kid like Bobby around the house would drive her wild, she declared—in secret.

ALAN, on his way now to Bernadine, despairing of seeing her alive, felt infinitely grateful for Phillipa. She would help him; she would be a real mother to Bobby.

He always thought something pleasant about Phillipa when Natalie threatened to obsess his mind. It helped him to forget her. But Phillipa was not unfailingly effective. Even to the door of Bernadine's house Alan thought of Natalie.

Oh, why, why, why couldn't she have been as good as she looked? When this was over, and Bernadine was "out there," Natalie, in their house a few streets away could have made everything so different—so bearable.

Life rang the doorbell, with a feeling of helplessness. Why was it, he wondered, that people always expected a man to meet these crises with undaunted courage? He would have given anything at that moment to have Natalie at his side.

Always going back to Natalie! He recognized the unformed wish in his mind as an outcropping of what he called "his damnable weakness." The weakness of which he was ashamed. Why couldn't he sustain his disgust and contempt for her? Why were his heart and his mind always engaged in warfare over her? Well, no matter. His heart had won once—now it was time for his head to take control of his destiny.

His anxiety over Bernadine deepened the moment the door was opened for him. It was not Nellie's tear-stained face that he saw. A strange maid told him, in husband and frightened tones, that he was to go up immediately.

Halfway up the stairs he heard Nellie speaking to Bobby, evidently trying to restrain the boy from going to his mother's room. Her voice wrung Alan's heart.

"Hush, darling, hush. Mother can't see you now. Be a good boy, Bobby, please."

Bobby's childish treble, raised in protest against this interference, caused Alan to reach hastily for his handkerchief.

"But I want to tell Mummy I've built a bridge," Bobby cried. "She wanted me to build her a bridge, and I've built it."

"She'll know, darling. She'll know everything you do; when you're a good boy and when you're not."

Alan went on, but an icy chill had gripped him. He was, then, too late. The maid's nod when he had whispered in the hall: "How is she?" had meant that Bernadine was gone.

One of the nurses who had been in constant attendance upon Bernadine of late, opened the
